US-A-6 126 445 (D1), which is considered to represent the prior art closest to the subject matter of claim 1, discloses a process for automatic creation of a dental superstructure for connecting to an implant using digital modelling, comprising the following steps:

- digitally record an actual or a modelled clinical picture of the implant (column 50, lines 35-45);
- analyse this picture and determine the axis of the implant (column 50, lines 45-53);
- calculate the optimum form of the superstructure (column 50, lines 58-65);
- produce the individual parts using a machining device from at least one blank (11) on the basis of the digital record.

The subject matter of claim 1 thus differs from the known process in that the superstructure is automatically separated into abutment and crown.

The subject matter of claim 1 is therefore novel (PCT Article 33(2)).

The problem addressed by the present invention may therefore be considered that of automatically shaping the abutment.

None of the citations teaches automatic separation of the superstructure and the subject matter of claim 1 consequently involves an inventive step (PCT Article 33(3)).

Claims 2-13 are dependent on claim 1 and therefore likewise meet the PCT requirements for novelty and independent step.

Claims 1-13 meet the PCT requirements for industrial applicability (PCT Article 33(4)).
